

Urantia Book Readers' European Winter Gathering

Dear friends, Loch Lomond • Scotland • 24–27 November 2006

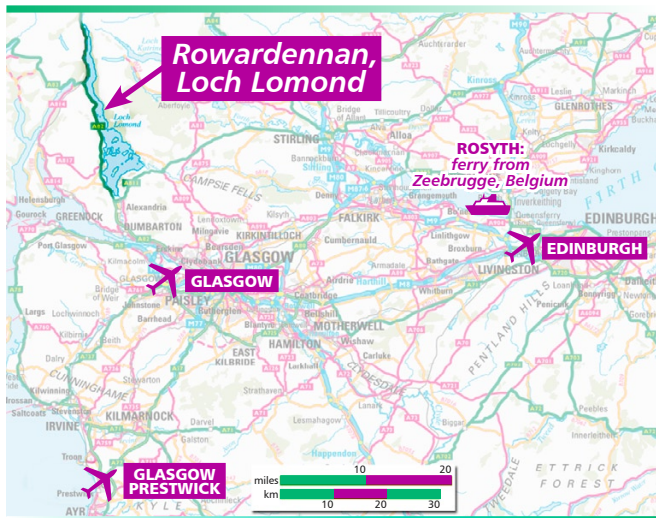

A small group of Urantia Book readers in Great Britain are organising a gathering to take place over the last weekend of November. We hope that this will be a great opportunity to kindle new friendships and deepen existing ones between readers in Europe—with our diverse languages, we have remained perhaps rather separated from each other over the years!

We've chosen the tranquil eastern shore of Loch Lomond in Scotland: a beautiful natural setting, staying in comfortable, cosy lodges—just the place to enjoy conversation and a perhaps a wee dram of whisky around the fire once the night draws in. Indeed, the weekend is to be quite an informal one, with the emphasis on friendship. And fingers crossed: the weather may allow walks in the fresh country air or spending time down by the loch, with daytime average temperatures of 7°C in late November.

As we particularly wish to welcome Urantia Book reader friends from across Europe, Loch Lomond was also chosen for its proximity to three international airports, one of which is a main hub for budget airline Ryanair.

Location

Direct flights to Prestwick with Ryanair

Practicalities

Accommodation

Comfortable six-berth lodges with well-appointed kitchens—we trust that any talented chefs among us will find enough willing kitchen hands to help prepare a hearty meal or two! The Rowardennan Hotel, which serves traditional Scottish dishes using fresh local produce, is also a short walk from the lodges.

The accommodation costs per person for the whole weekend are expected to be around £45/€70 (total cost for either two or three nights). Each lodge has one double, one twin and one twin bunk bedroom.

Transport

Glasgow airport and central train station are both within easy reach. There are also direct trains from Prestwick airport to central Glasgow. We'll be hiring a car or minibus (depending on numbers) to transport people between Loch Lomond and Glasgow—this will cost no more than £15/€23 total per person.

We'd love for you to join us! So please act soon—ideally by 22 October; space is limited and bargain flights and train fares get snapped up quickly.

Please contact: Gavin Dormand • gavin.d@boltblue.com • +44 7973 711497
14 Brockwell Park Gardens • LONDON • SE24 9BL • England